1. Trading is Highly Speculative and Involves Risk

Engaging in foreign exchange (Forex) trading-including through PAMM, Copytrade, Forex Signals, or Coaching services provided by Ajmal Idlan-is highly speculative in nature. The Forex market is known for its volatility, and price movements can occur rapidly and unpredictably. As such, this type of trading is not suitable for all individuals. It is only appropriate for those who thoroughly understand the inherent economic and technical risks, possess sufficient trading experience, and have the financial capacity to endure potential losses, including the total loss of capital. Clients must evaluate their financial situation independently and determine whether participation in such services aligns with their risk tolerance and investment goals.

2. No Guarantees of Profit

Ajmal Idlan makes no express or implied guarantees regarding the profitability of any service provided. While past performance data may be shared for informational purposes, it does not constitute a promise of future results. Trading involves uncertainty, and profits cannot be assured. Clients are reminded that historical returns are not indicative of future performance, and all trading outcomes are subject to market fluctuations.

5. Leverage and Margin Risk

Forex trading commonly involves the use of leverage, which can magnify both potential gains and losses. A relatively small price movement in the market can significantly impact your investment, sometimes leading to the complete loss of capital. While leverage may enhance returns under favorable market conditions, it equally increases the risk exposure during adverse market movements. You should fully understand the implications of margin trading before participating.
